Rather than being a work authored by a single person, the 36 Stratagems is a collection of warfare wisdom that was derived over many centuries of inter-state conflict within China. Many of the stratagems involve deception of some kind and may be used in changing minds, though of course the values of modern society act to moderate effective action. Having said this, where the alternative is harmful conflict, deception may be the best alternative.

Some stratagems might be too powerful or good to let people use them more than once a phase. An Alaitoc army that could use Lighting Fast Reflexes on every unit in one turn would be very annoying to fight. Though if they did so, they would quickly burn through their CPs. Some stratagems might still be labeled Once A Phase Only.

The thirty-six stratagems, used both in real warfare and by "corporate warriors", attributed to Sun Tzu (of The Art of War fame). He probably never came up with such a list (especially since the names of several strategies reference events from long after his death), though most of them do have their roots in his book.

~~The Thirty-Six Stratagems / Useful Notes - TV Tropes~~

The 36 Stratagems emphasizes the use of deception, subterfuge or hidden tactics to achieve one's objectives. Hence the title the Secret Art of War . They are grouped into six sets; the first three are designed for use when one holds the advantage, and the second three for when one is at a disadvantage.
